He was a quiet, polite, clean, pleasant gentleman of the old style. I think his home was one of the most pleasant places to visit that it was my good fortune to enter.

He was for many years a member of the Presbyterian church in Little Rock. Wherever he was known he was loved. He had been away from here so long, 39 years, that few of his old friends are left, but those few will testify to his great worth and shed a tear of sympathy for his Fannie Machen. family.

PINEY FORK CAMP MEETING

is in Progress with good interest and big Crowds-The Rev. Mays is doing the Preaching

In the early part of the nineteenth century a small band of good people living in the wild thinly settled country around what is now known as "Old Piney Fork Camp Ground," organized and built a rude log house in which to meet and worship. After her organization, almost one hundred years ago, she began to grow and get stronger and the rude log other hut gave way to a biger andie brick

Many has no this place of worship became a camp ground, where our grandfathers and grandmothers and little ones would go and spend a few days in an old fashioned camp meeting and from that day to this the second Sunday in August has been looked forward to, by the young as well as the old, as a time when there would be a reunion of old acquaintances and a number of souls be born into the kingdom of their

The annual camp meeting is in in progress now with the Rev. Mays. of Indiana, assisting the pastor. Rev. King. Rev. Mays is an able man and has been doing some splendid preaching and by the hearty and earnest co-operation of the good people, there has already been much and lasting good accomplished.
